

A modern biological waste treatment plant employing active sludge has the task of depurating the water used without any additional chemical agent.
Respect for the environment is important as much as creating a high quality wet blue product.